PREFACE

With the publication of this, the second volume of THE ABRIDGED COMPENDIUM OF AMERICAN GENEALOGY (First Families of America), the feasibility of compiling and publishing a comprehensive genealogical history of the American nation after the lapse of three hundred years is believed to have been demonstrated.

The extensive use and critical examination to which the work has been subjected during the biennium since the publication of Volume One, has confirmed its plan and scope as laid down in that volume, and its acceptance as the standard genealogical encyclopedia for this country by those best qualified to judge assures its permanency in the list of indispensable works of reference. Therefore, additional volumes, each complete in itself, will be published biennially.

Volume One, published January, 1926, was the culmination of seven years' labor (1918-25), during which period the most extensive genealogical files extant were accumulated. Its 1,148 pages contain over 5,000 records and upwards of 10,000 lineages; the alphabetical index of names is the largest genealogical index ever compiled for a single volume, and refers to upwards of a quarter of a million names.

Volume Two contains over 1,600 records, and upwards of 5,000 lineages. In this volume effort was directed toward completeness of lineages, rather than toward including a larger number of records, with the result that, whereas in Volume One the lineages average 2 per record, in this volume the lineages average 3½ per record. With the "tracing out" of collateral lineages as accomplished in this volume, it is really no longer abridged.

Admitting illustrations into this volume in conjunction with records was conceded in response to many requests for this feature. The fact that illustrations do lend "color" to family lineage and also that in this work valuable photographs may be permanently preserved are sufficient reasons why this "memorial" feature will be retained in succeeding volumes.

PREFACE

The ideal upon which this work was founded is national service, and the publishers and editors have held this ideal clearly in mind throughout the period of preparation and publication. So dedicated, the editors welcome suggestions for improvement in style and treatment of subject matter, as well as criticism tending to increase the usefulness of the book, not only for the benefit of the present generations, but also for posterity. Suggestions of names and data pertaining to them will be thankfully received and accorded every consideration for inclusion in Volume Three of this work. However, the editors reserve the right to accept or reject any data at their discretion. No record in this volume has been included with any other view than to increase the usefulness of the book; no space has been paid for, nor can it be.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Sincere thanks are due to persons who have kindly loaned books and manuscripts which have assisted greatly in the production of this work, and also to many who have offered suggestions that materially aided in the solution of knotty problems. Especially are thanks due to officers of the patriotic societies. Their hearty co-operation, based upon personal experience, has been a constant source of encouragement, so that it may truly be said that courtesies received from them have contributed in a larger degree toward the completion of this volume than any other extraneous source that could be named.

EXPLANATION AND ANALYSIS OF RECORDS

While every person acquainted with genealogy will readily understand the records as they appear in this volume, an explanation is here given for the information of those not familiar with genealogical usages and terms.

As no standardized system for recording American genealogies was in existence at the time this work was projected, there was no pattern on which to fashion the records. English methods, designed mainly for descent from royalty, nobility or gentry, could not be applied to American usages; therefore it was necessary to originate and develop a system to conform to American standards of the worth of ancestry. It is believed that the system adopted for The Abridged Compendium of American Genealogy will meet with general approval for its simplicity of style and clarity of presentation.

In numbering the generations in America it was found necessary to represent the subject of the record as number one, and his parents as number two, since under this system the lineages of both father and mother, seldom of equal number of generations, always conjoin in their common number 2. Thus, the subject is represented as number one; his parents are always numbered 2; his grandparents in both lines of descent are always numbered 3; his great grandparents in both lines of descent are always numbered 4; and so on, to the earliest known ancestor in America, who is given the highest number, which shows the number of generations in America in each line of descent.

Confusion was also avoided under this method of numbering by eliminating the designation "10th from," or "5th from," as the case may be; the numbers, as given in the records, show clearly the number of generations in America and that the subject is a descendant OF the ancestors named; of course, he is also descended FROM the ancestors, but in a generation one number lower than that given the ancestors in the record.

The double dates which will be found throughout the work in the earlier generations in the records are made necessary by the change from the Old Style to the New Style of reckoning of the beginning of the year. In 1563, France adopted January 1st as the beginning of the year. Scotland adopted January 1st in 1600, but it was not until 1752 that England adopted the same date. Before 1752 (when the year began March 25th), in the records of the colonies that followed the English custom, dates between January 1st and March 24th, inclusive, were often indicated by two consecutive years (1700/01), to be interpreted at the option of the reader, as conforming to the New, or to the Old Style. For example: February 22, 1700/01, meant February 22, 1700, if the year was considered in the Old Style, ending March 24; if considered in the New Style, ending December 31, it would be 1701. The last year of a double date corresponds to our present system of reckoning.

Hyphenated double dates, as 1700-01, indicate that the event to which these years refer is not definitely known, but that it did occur during either of the years. When a period of years is hyphenated, as 1700-05, it indicates that the event referred to occurred between those years.

Records are divided into paragraphs, as follows: Name of the subject with place and date of birth; paternal lineage from the earliest known ancestor in America down to the grandparents (numbered 3); maternal lineage similar to the paternal; parents of the subject (numbered 2), with their issue numbered consecutively in the order of birth, and to whom married; data of marriage of the subject, the issue of this marriage, also numbered consecutively in the order of birth, with data of education, military service and marriage; biography of the subject, ending with his present residence address.

It will be noted that the surname of the earliest ancestor, in each line, appears in Bold Face type; this is to emphasize that the following generations, whose Christian names only are given, are all of the same surname as the name in the Bold Face type unless the surname is changed by the marriage of a daughter, in which case her husband's name appears also in Bold Face type to emphasize the change in surname. In some records it will be noted that the surname changes frequently and every change is emphasized by Bold Face type. This style of emphasis has also been carried out in the surname of the father of the subject to emphasize the fact that his children, whose Christian names only are given, bear the same surname.

WILLIAM GOODELL (1792-1878).

According to Henry Wilson the foremost digger-up of facts and arguments for the political abolitionists. Edited the Investigator (Providence), the Philanthropist (Boston), and the Genius of Temperance (New York). Was with Arthur Tappan in founding the N.Y. Anti-Slavery Society in the face of mob violence, and soon after, 1833, with Garrison and Whittier in starting the American Anti-Slavery Society in Philadelphia. Helped Binney and Gerritt Smith start the Liberty Party in 1840. In 1843 he prevailed against Salmon P. Chase in securing an early nomination of a Liberty Party ticket, and from this time until the end of the Civil War he was editing papers and writing books. He took the radical position, now recognized as sound, that Congress had the right to abolish slavery in the states, and this radical wing which he represented was of high service to the Free Soil and Republican parties in enabling them to occupy a middle ground.

DANIEL MacLAREN, of ancient Highland clan (Scotch), was a son of Peter MacLaren and Elizabeth MacGregor. Daniel came from Comrie, near Balquhidder, Perthshire, to New York City, 1783. His name appears in the New York City Directory of 1787 (the second issue) until 1825, the year of his death (with one omission). From 1787 to 1792 he was the only MacLaren mentioned in the directory as well as in quite a few of the other issues. He married, 1788, Sarah Stowe, a Quakeress of Philadelphia; their children were: Sarah (Mrs. Abraham Quackenbush of New York); Job, a hero of the War of 1812, who received land at Henderson, Ill., in recognition of his services; Peter; Anne; Daniel, Jr.; and Vesta (Mrs. Charles Smith Miller, of Brooklyn).
